More than two decades ago, John Galliano and
Alexander McQueen
arrived on the
fashions scene when
the business was in
an artistic and economic rut. Both
wanted to
revolutionize fashion

settings. McQueen, though nearly ten years younger than Galliano, was a brilliant technician and a visionary artist who brought a new reality to fashion, as well as an otherworldly beauty. For his first official collection at the tender age of twenty-three, McQueen did what few in fashion ever

achieve: he invented
a new silhouette, the Bumster. They had
similar backgrounds:
sensitive, shy gay
men raised in tough
London
neighborhoods, their
love of fashion
nurtured by their doting mothers. Both struggled to get their businesses off the

their distinct styles were also reflected across the media landscape. With their help, luxury fashion evolved from a clutch of small, family-owned businesses into a $280 billion-a-year global corporate industry. Executives pushed the designers to meet increasingly rapid deadlines. For both Galliano and McQueen, the pace was unsustainable. In 2010, McQueen took his own life three weeks before his womens' wear show. The same week that Galliano was fired, Forbes named Arnault the fourth richest man in the world. Two months later, Kate Middleton wore a
